DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

1. Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:
  - I. Claims 1-7, drawn to a method for designing an LSI using a conversion step to produce an encrypted circuit, classified in class 713, subclass 189.
  - II. Claims 8-20 and 23, drawn to a method for verifying an encrypted LSI by conducting simulation for design data, classified in class 713, subclass 187.
  - III. Claim 21, drawn to a method for designing an LSI using a conversion step to produce an encrypted circuit based on timing information, classified in class 713, subclass 500.
  - IV. Claim 22, drawn to a method for designing an LSI comprising a step of decoding circuit design data encrypted together with a circuit for determining a unique ID into actual design data and a unique ID determination circuit, classified in class 713, subclass 167.

The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of the following reasons:

2. Inventions of Group I and Group II are related as subcombinations disclosed as usable together in a single combination. The subcombinations are distinct from each other if they are shown to be separately usable. In the instant case, invention of Group I has separate utility such as a method for designing an LSI. See MPEP § 806.05(d).

3. Inventions of Group I and Group III are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because the subcombination is not essential to combination. The subcombination has separate utility such as encrypting design data based on a conversion rule using extracted timing information.

4. Inventions of Group I and Group IV are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because the subcombination is not essential to combination. The subcombination has separate utility such as decoding circuit design data encrypted together with a circuit for determining a unique ID into actual design data and a unique ID determination circuit.

5. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art as shown by their different classification, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

Art Unit: 2132

6. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and the search required for Group I is not required for Groups II, III and IV; the search required for Group II is not required for Groups I, III and IV; the search required for Group III is not required for Groups I, II and IV; and the search required for Group IV is not required for Groups I, II and III, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

7. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art because of their recognized divergent subject matter, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

8. A telephone call was made to Michael E. Fogarty on August 19, 2004 to request an oral election to the above restriction requirement, but did not result in an election being made.

9. Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed (37 CFR 1.143).
